Westpac will process your International Payment on the earliest date available for the currency and country chosen. Under normal circumstances, the International Payment should arrive in the payee's account within 1-2 international business days. However, Westpac can give no general assurances on the timing of receipt of the funds by the payee.

Delays may occur for a number of reasons beyond Westpac's control. Westpac shall not be responsible for any delay in transmission of the International Payment.

Payment and handling charges and commissions are often levied by overseas intermediary and beneficiary banks ("Other Banks"). Westpac has no control over the charges levied by Other Banks and these charges are subject to change. Please note these charges can be substantial, particularly for payments in a currency other than that of the receiving country. Other Bank charges will be deducted from the International Payment and therefore will decrease the amount received by the payee.
